VIEWING THE MARKETS.

JAY GOULD'S REPORTED LOSS IS A WHITE-WINGED RUMOR.

Away From the Scenes of Bulls and Bears Hunting Health—Mr. Vanderbilt's Doings—Foreign Fancies—Italian—Ing Stocks—Stiff Gambling.

New York, Aug. 4.—The stock market continues to exhibit all the artificial strength which the Vanderbilt-Morgan combination gave it in the beginning of July. The daily transactions last week were not so large as they had been the week previous, but the speculative list has been steadily broadening in the sense that the advance is no longer limited to the leading stocks, and that those bankrupt concerns have had their securities marked up almost as fast as the solvent companies. That a room trader takes hold of any will eat stock is enough to send it up four or five points in a few days.

France had in the fifteenth century, a law which gave a maiden the privilege of rescuing a criminal condemned to death by declaring at the foot of the scaffold her intention to marry him. Something similar is going on now within our bankrupt concerns, like the Erie, Denver and several others. The board men come forward and say that it is sufficient to stay the proceedings of the execution. Certainly nobody can want Denver or Erie stock, yet the former has declined in price during the last three weeks and the latter has nearly doubled.

It was reported in the street in the beginning of last week that Gould was caught short of the market, was compelled to sell at the loss of a million and a half, and had since declared his resolve to join the bull ranks. There was not a word of truth in this story. He and his broker sold a pile of what is known as Gould specialties, and were talking in a very bearish tone. They still continue to sell all the market will take, but they don't talk so bearish any longer, for they saw that the board men were making money out of this story of Gould being caught short. The story is about to those who have long memories, or even to those who have any memory at all. It is just one of those stories which is started for a purpose, and the absurdity of which, it is hoped, will not be exposed until the purpose has been served.

As for Jay Gould himself, he has neither done nor said anything for the last two weeks in Wall street. He is away on his pecking tour, admiring the rugged beauties of Mount Desert, and enjoying the bracing air of Nova Scotia. According to the latest information he was to remain away a fortnight, and his trusted lieutenant, Mr. V. C. Connor, was also to leave, to be absent several days.

Now that English papers containing comments upon the Vanderbilt-Morgan deal are coming to hand, we have an opportunity to see how the English financial world looks upon these deals and upon the influence in the stock list which has since been made. It appears that the view taken by no means forcible, and that an opinion prevails that "deals between Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Roberts may increase their capacity of doing business, but in no way improve either the general condition of railway traffic or the paying capacity of their roads."

The London Financial News says that Mr. Vanderbilt has once more "tempted providence by attempting to match his money against Mr. Gould's brain and carry on a bull campaign by himself." After giving an outline of the Vanderbilt-Morgan deal, the paper says that "it is not surprising to throw up our hats and rejoice over a twenty per cent. maintenance of which is impossible, and which, even if it were to be maintained, is not remunerative."

Things must really look funny to the foreign investors who are informed about the doing of our leading financiers, when, for instance, they see Deacon White selling his Lackawanna down to 94, and quietly binding up his friends to sell at that figure, and then turning bull at it at nearly ten points higher. It was but a few weeks ago, when Lake Shore was selling at 55, that Mr. Vanderbilt expressed the opinion that further liquidation was inevitable. Yet the same Vanderbilt now advises his friends at Saratoga hotels to hold on to the Lake Shore they can at about 70. Mr. Voorhees took of New York Central when it was at a bottomless pit, yet he seems now to be a bull on the same stock at 84.

Similar conversions have been performed by almost all our large operators, and the outside investor, whether domestic or foreign, seeing that nothing has changed in the condition of trade, must naturally come to the conclusion that the movement in the stock market is pure gambling and that he has no business to join it.

Take for instance New York Central stock and assume that everything projected in regard to its future is accomplished most successfully. What will be the result to begin with this figure? It will increase to $50,000,000 and its fixed charges at $2,000,000 a year. Then it will take no less than six months to pay off the debt of the New York Central, and after that it will take at least a year to show the working effect of this compact upon the earnings of New York Central. Assuming that everything will go on in the smoothest and loveliest way and that, at the end of the eighth month, a 6 per cent. dividend will be shown on paper, or even paid out, it is the stock worth 90 to day.

It is quite natural that the promoters of the scheme, who began to buy the stock at 90, are very anxious to persuade the public that New York Central is cheap at present figures. But they can't convince any man of sense that stock of a heavily mortgaged company laboring under a crushing debt, and with a competition showing nothing but a vague prospect of a possible dividend eighteen months hence, is worth more than sixty or seventy cents on a dollar. But as the men who are engaged in the venture are anxious to sell, they will probably try to advance prices still further, or, at all events, to maintain them until an unlocked for change in the market situation gives them a chance to dispose of their holdings.

One of the most curious features of the present crazy speculation is that the same men who are bulls on stocks are also bulls on wheat. Of course Vanderbilt and Morgan do not extend their speculative proclivities as far as Chicago. They know that they will make money enough in New York. But men like Armour and Washburn are said to be big purchasers of wheat on the theory that the spring wheat crop will be almost as big a failure as the winter wheat. At the same time one of these speculators is buying St. Paul while the other is said to be buying all the Great Transcontinental and Northern Pacific that he can get hold of. All these companies derive their largest profit from the transportation of wheat. Now if the crops are to be bad, how can the railroads which move them make any money? A bull on wheat should naturally be a bear in stocks, and a bear on wheat a bull on stocks. But this is merely logic of which neither Wall street nor Chicago takes any notice in its gambling.

A CITY ONE MONTH OLD.

Fern City Flourishing Here Old Wells Have Recently Been Discovered

Oil City, Pa., Aug. 4.—A correspondent has returned from the well fields of Copely Run, sixteen miles from this city. On a former visit, one month ago, there were here a school house, a hardware store, and a saloon. Now there is a thriving town, and in the name of Fern City, with a weekly newspaper and other evidences of civilization. Nearly fifty buildings are up, or in various stages of completion, while a dozen families and stores have their household goods on their hands. The town is a beautiful one, and the owners thereof only sit on the tops of the piles and wait for carpenters to begin on their buildings. A post on a recent lot held the announcement that the "Imperial Drug Store" will shortly be established here. Beneath the trees a family has gathered its household goods, and the iron spit among the chairs; the woman is busy making coffee on a stove powered by a tree; a man is hanging up a sheet for the purpose of ironing; and the men for the night, and a sign announces that all this will soon be transformed into a restaurant. There is a constant hum of industry and screaming of saws, mingled with the croaking of walking beams and the puff of engines. All this life and activity is the result of a good oil well found here three months ago, and the extension of the territory. The new field is now producing about a thousand barrels a day, and the wells give promise of holding out.

Only a few days ago, Copley city was the poorest town in the country. When the sun rose it caught several shanties on wheels moving in the direction of Fern City. The dusty road leading to that place was lined with men on horseback and men on foot. The mayor of Copley city undertook an inventory, and found that two-thirds of his subjects had left the place. Many of the city's houses had been taken apart, and nothing remained but a few days' worth of furniture. The city is now a water trough, which is fashioned out of a huge pine log. The manipulator of the trough is a man who is said to have been in that section, and at present only five or six wells are drilling. All the excitement is now in the town, which is the latest and richest oil town in the region. The city is named after Fern Farm, on whose fertile farm the empyrean town is located.

It takes good and lively carpenters about two days to start and finish a two story house. The work is rapid, and the tenants do not have long to wait for their dwellings. More than a dozen families and storekeepers have all their goods and furniture piled up on beams in their homes. They are waiting for the busy and hard-worked carpenters to come along. Enterprises predominate on all sides.

In a few days Fern City will number fully five hundred souls. The inevitable bank is always one of the first institutions that is established in an oil town. In Fern City the giant tiger can be fought in no less than four different places, all of which are close to the town. The city is now a water trough, which is fashioned out of a huge pine log. The manipulator of the trough is a man who is said to have been in that section, and at present only five or six wells are drilling. All the excitement is now in the town, which is the latest and richest oil town in the region. The city is named after Fern Farm, on whose fertile farm the empyrean town is located.

Saved a Week. MILWAUKEE, Aug. 4.—The Lake Shore & Western south bound express narrowly escaped a serious accident at a point about one hundred and seventy miles north of Milwaukee, by a break in a rail, presumably caused by a freight train which passed about half an hour before the passenger train. A farmer by chance passing along the track discovered the break as the express was approaching at a rapid rate, and by waving his coat and hat attracted the attention of the engineer just in time to stop the moving train before reaching the broken rail. The train was stopped, and the freight train was moved out of the way. The passenger train was then moved forward, and the accident was averted. The train was moving at a high rate of speed, and would have been through a very serious accident.

Death on the Rail. SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Aug. 4.—James Corbett, of St. Paul, this county, was carried to Greenburg on a train that brought with it a stop at his home. Starting to walk back, he got within two miles of Adams when he sat down on the end of a cross-tie, and it is presumed fell asleep. A train coming west struck him, producing injuries from which he died. The remains were brought here, and he had been suffering terribly with toothache for three nights and was physically exhausted. He was thirty years old and leaves a wife and three children. He was the reputation of being a sober, industrious man.

Serious Charges. DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 4.—Certain members of the Iowa legislature have been charged against E. B. Crawford, recently appointed postmaster at that place. They declare that he secured the place by employing J. C. Chase, a broker, to buy the Dakota territory for the territorial court of Yankton. These charges have been made by a committee of the legislature, and are signed by E. Murphy, J. C. Kelly, Judge Allison and many others.

THE DRIFT IN ENGLAND.

ON THE SHIFTING SEA OF POLITICAL AND WAR PROBLEMS.

The Irish Wedge Between the Factions Going Deeper Into the Political Time—The Late Sir Moses Montefiore, Cause—Foreign News.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Although parliament has not yet adjourned the London season of 88 is now dead and buried. The trees in the park are beginning to look brown and arid. Goodwill is over. The lord mayor's usual practice of green turtle to the ministers just before the end of the session has been eaten. Franchises are taking as fast as "Unitas Vanitatis." All who are not shamed to bow by politics or business are "over the hills and far away."

The situation still continues to be precarious. Lord Salisbury's remarks over the old mayor's turtle showed clearly that he considers himself merely as the stop gap between a big gap in the Tory and Liberal already warring for every inch of vantage ground in the coming elections. In foreign politics, as well as home affairs, the general drift is toward a more warlike attitude. In the Central Asia it is Russia, in Egypt it is France, and in South Africa it is England that are distinctly "checked to England's queue."

The Irish outlook is not more cheerful. Ireland seems already splitting like a wedge into the sea. The waterbury republicans, like Cleveland democrats, like Butler greenbackers, like Gladstone liberals, the Salisbury-Churchill Tories now run the risk of sliding their bog trap in the Irish question. Lord Randolph Churchill favors the extension of the Irish franchise, a liberal land purchase bill and bonfire in Irish localities. It was on these lines that he addressed a grand political meeting at Liverpool.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed at Liverpool, and 5,000 people had secured tickets to hear the Tories' second Diemitz talk about Ireland; but a rigid rule of parliamentary etiquette requires that a minister in making speeches in privacies must not introduce his party. Lord Randolph Churchill had agreed to make the Liverpool speech without its Irish party, but the two conservative members from Liverpool who they thought about it all.

At the very last moment, when Lord Randolph asked Lord Clan Hamilton and Mr. Whitley, the Conservative members for Liverpool, by what train they and he were to leave for the north, they were informed that neither of them intended to go to the proposed grand political meeting. In reply to Lord Randolph's questions the two men said: "We don't go to there. We don't approve of your Irish ideas, and will fight tooth and nail the Mainstrance policy of the present administration."

The official enemies of Lord Salisbury and his colleagues depends upon the breath of Lord Randolph Churchill. Lord Randolph feels this, and has the pluck to act upon his convictions. Other leading Conservatives feel this, and the Tory party is now in a state of confusion. The Tory party is now in a state of confusion. The Tory party is now in a state of confusion.

The Promise of Montefiore. LONDON, Aug. 4.—In each of the seven synagogues of London the customary prayer used by Portuguese Jews for the repose of the soul was used on the occasion of the mourning for Montefiore. In several of these synagogues were delivered, as in one synagogue near the Langham hotel; another, a very ancient one, in the city square, at Great St. Helen's; the "great" synagogue, also venerable, at Abchurch Lane, the fashionable one at Baywater. At the last named the prayer, the day was delivered by Rabbi Simon Singer, who preached from the text, "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my end be like his."

The sermon began by calling the death a "fresh Jewish historical landmark." It said: "The foremost figure of the last century of Jewish history has disappeared from human sight. The age, which will probably be remembered for the triumph of Israel together, but there were more than could be numbered by the eye to fulfill the ancient Jewish obligation of accompanying the dead."

From Russia to the lands washed by southern seas, from where the cradle of race to the the end of the world, our brethren have reared new homes and become citizens of new states; wherever upon the face of the globe the Jewish people were turned, they found a congenial spot on the cliffs of Kent. Nor had the Gentile world, from our gracious Sovereign, been less eager to honor the departed Jew, than the Gentile world to honor his tomb. The many voiced press of this and other countries has spoken in praise of the many qualities of Sir Moses Montefiore, and his life has been a conspicuous example of his character of Sir Moses followed, dwelling especially on his steadfastness of principle and kindness of his nature. "To the last he maintained the same lively interest in all good work as characterized his earliest days. He had attained a pinnacle of moral greatness such as Channing calls that sublime energy by which the soul, smitten with love of virtue, binds itself indissolubly for life and death to truth and duty."

Having spoken of his chivalrous devotion to his wife and her memory, his attachment to the Jewish faith and ritual, and his passionate love for Zion and her children, the rabbi referred to a marked peculiarity of his character—his not being injured by prosperity or praise, and concluded by saying that: "Of no diplomat, or of no statesman, but of a true patriot, he was a true patriot. Even when he was as old as Methuselah, he was as true as a true patriot. The tomb is a square stone building with a dome and portico, situated directly in front of the synagogue. Sir Moses Montefiore lies next to his wife. Each is covered with an immense slab of granite with a Hebrew inscription over the door. The Hebrew inscription is as follows: "Into Thy hands I commit my soul. Will thou be merciful to me, and open, but it is certain that the deceased will leave considerable sum to charity. Among the trustees by the will are Lord Randolph and Arthur Cohen, member of parliament."

"Furthest Fancies."

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The St. James Gazette has a general public opinion in severely criticism of the archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Manning and the bishop of London for acting as a volunteer committee to aid in advancing the cause of the Pall Mall Gazette. It claims that by their silence regarding its rhetoric, which not one of them has a word to say in its praise, they sanction an abuse of the press, and claims that they also failed to rebuke the "scurrilous" who narrated his little experiments on virtue and his success. Public opinion everywhere asks what becomes of the pretence that the legislature aids the rich to detach the poor from the poor man's friends, have so far failed to do so. These committees have greatly lost the confidence of the public and their friends.

GRANT'S FIRST NOMINATION.

The Narrow Escape of a Church Which Bore an Old Inscription During the War.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 4.—A veteran of the Seventeenth Maine regiment tells the story of Gen. Grant's first nomination for the presidency. The Second corps was marching from the city of Birmingham, and on the morning, when about ten miles from the Confederate capital, a halt was made for breakfast near an old church. Some of the boys entered the church out of curiosity, and the first thing that met their gaze was an inscription in charcoal upon the dead white wall of the church: "General Grant, killed here, July 1, 1862." "Clayton S. Grant may be being drawn and quartered."

The impulse of the soldiers was to take revenge by burning the church, and this would undoubtedly have been done had not one of the men approached the pulpit and climbed the high altar. Evidence could not be read from the further end of the church. It was this: "Hitherto the laurels of victory, drawn in the chariot of peace, and quartered in the White House at Washington."

The church was saved.

A historical officer here tells a new story of Gen. Grant. In one of the great battles of Grant's last campaign a Maine soldier received a good and painful wound, not a dangerous wound. He was but a short distance from Gen. Grant, who at the time was talking to Gen. Hancock. The Maine man yelled with considerable vigor, and Gen. Grant, turning to Col. Moore, now of Detroit, said: "Let that man go to the rear; he is doing the entire rest of the army if he keeps up screaming in that way." At that time Gen. Grant was in constant danger of being killed.

Killed His Wife's seducer.

KANAWHA, Mich., Aug. 4.—Harvey Keith, a Michigan farmer, was a prominent farmer in Van Buren county, disappeared. His wife was found in Mack's lake, badly hurt and apparently murdered. Evidence taken before a coroner's jury implicates a man named Mark, who found Keith with his knife in his hand, and a woman named Mark, who is innocent. A brother of Mark is said to have been the same incentive to the deed. Mark has been arrested. The murder is the most horrible one ever committed in Van Buren county, and excitement is intense.

Cut Down by Halibutons.

PORT Jervis, Aug. 4.—There was a terrible thunder storm here. Lightning struck many times near the village. The hall fell for half an hour, completely destroying most of the crops north of the village. The halibutons were as large as hickory nuts, and in places the ground was covered to the depth of several inches with all kinds of garden truck were broken flat to the ground and the total loss. Many orchards are devastated, the fruit being pulled off by the hail. The November rainfall for fifteen miles from this town is many thousands dollars poorer.

He Served With Grant in Mexico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The funeral of Dr. Witt Clinton Slater, who served in the army command with General Grant in Mexico, was held at his home, 678 West Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn. It was largely through Dr. Slater's efforts that Salton's bugle was established. He was a musician, and with the sailors, and was a constant contributor to the Salton's Magazine.

Fanny Miller's Mother Killed.

DETROIT, Aug. 4.—A. B. Williams and William Williams, both of the Michigan Jonesville, were struck by a train and terribly mangled. Green died and Williams died. The train was on the track, and the hillside on the track, and being somewhat in liquor, did not see the train coming. Each was about twenty-two years old.

Saratoga Races.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The weather was threatening and the track muddy. There are about 50,000 people at the track. First race, for two-year-olds, two furlongs. Kirtland, ridden by Mr. J. C. Colman, won. Time 1:04. Mutuals paid $35.00.

The following complimentary notice concerning an invention by Dr. Hum-long Nae, a former citizen of this place, is clipped from the Falls City (Nebr.) Daily Argus:

"Dr. Neal has got a fortune in his grasp and worldwide fame before him. He has gotten up a patent baby cradle, and we have no hesitancy in pronouncing it the nearest and most complete concoction we ever saw. It is arranged—well, an explanation is difficult to give. Anyway, it is so arranged that it can be neatly folded so it may be placed in an ordinary trunk, and not take up much space either. It is composed of wood entirely, save three or four small brass hinges. Go and see it. Its a beauty and a novelty."

Rev. J. A. HENDERSON returned from Paris' Hill last night and will go back to-day. He says: "In some respects I think the Rev. Sam Jones is the greatest preacher of the nineteenth century. He can deliver a finished sermon when he wishes to do so, and at the same time can be in the matter of humor, Dan Rice, Mark Twain and Josh Billings all put together. It seems to me that God has just raised Sam Jones up, as he did Elijah, for a special work. In personal appearance, he is a duplicate of General Basil Duke. I said to him, 'Brother Jones give us a sermon minus the fun,' he said he would do so and the next day he preached one of the grandest sermons I ever heard, from the text 'What I have written, I have written.' Bascom in his palmist days never surpassed it."

Dr. Tiffany, of New York, preached at Paris' Hill last Sabbath to about 3,000 people, a grand sermon from the theme, "The Cross and its Magnitude." The meeting will continue over next Sunday. There will be preaching every day this week by Dr. West, of Tennessee, Dr. Hagood, of Georgia, and Dr. Willett, of Kentucky. The hotel here is very good, the cottages have all been repaired and are in the best condition. Let everybody go and hear these distinguished ministers.

The election, Monday, was, without doubt, the quietest ever held in this city. One-half the voters at least did not seem to realize that an election was going on. Numbers of our best citizens passed the polls once at least, and perhaps two or three times during the day and never offered to vote. And then again quite a number of our merchants and clerks did not seem to take any interest in what was going on and so remained away from the voting places. The same might be said of the country vote. The colored citizen, too, did not exercise his right of suffrage as in past elections. In Mayville Precinct No. 2, there was but one colored vote cast in the forenoon. The few who did vote, wanted to vote for the "amendment," only as they called it. It is safe to say that the colored vote was the smallest ever polled in this county.

This general inaction on the part of the voters, was owing altogether to the want of opposition. The Democrats knew their candidates would be elected and did not seem to think of all their obligations on them to go the polls; and the Republicans having no candidates of their own in the field, didn't care to go to the polls and vote for the Democratic nominees. Of course there were some exceptions, a big majority of the votes cast was in favor of the call for a convention to revise the constitution. Quite a number, however, said they didn't know anything about the matter, and wouldn't vote at all. "It was good enough for them," and one voter thought the "people had too many privileges now," and wouldn't vote for a change for fear they would be given still more. Another one thought if they got to changing the constitution they might make it worse than it is now.

The following is the vote of the county so far as heard from. The official returns will make some change:

Miss Kate Shivers, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. John Schiller, for several weeks at her home in Manchester last Saturday.

The bland dollar makes a satisfactory weight by which to test letters under the new rules, as it weighs within a fraction an ounce. Tramps should cut this out and paste it in their alleged hats.

"Ma, this paper says there are 3,950 hands of mercy in this country. What is a band of mercy?" "An association for charitable purposes, child!" "Oh! I thought it was a brass band that didn't practice of evenings."

A Political Office was accented in the street. "Where have you been?" "I have been up to see Smith, the Politician, and had a long talk with him." "That's strange. I was at his office ten minutes ago, and was told that he was out of town and wouldn't be back for several weeks." "You don't say so?" "Yes, you're right." "I'm a Meat Bill!" [New York Sun.]

A Republican the other day was seeking to twist a Democrat, an old farmer up about Louisville, about the hard times, and wanted to know if the country was in good times we were to have under Democratic rule. The old farmer listened to him quietly, and finally remarked: "My friend, did you ever hear of a farmer, no matter how thrifty, who could take a farm that had been running down for twenty-four years and get it better than it was inside of six months? I guess not. It takes some time to repair the fences, improve and strengthen the soil, clear out the weeds, and briars, and thistles, open up the drains, ditches and water-courses, drive away the vermin and renovate the farm and buildings generally. This is just what the administration is doing now—putting the national farm in order. Wait until we get the farm, which the Republicans have been letting run down for years, improved and in good condition, and then you will see some beautiful crops, and the country will laugh with rich harvests, and the people will rejoice in prosperity. My friend, the good times are coming—wait a little longer. The old farmer was right—he talked the best kind of good sense." [Portsmouth Times.]

Cure for Piles.
Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of tightness in the rectum, and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blood, bleeding and itching pile yield at once to the application of Dr. Rossano's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, dissolving the piles, and relieving the itching, and affecting a permanent cure. 30 cent. At all druggists, or Rossano Medicine Co., Plaza, D. Sold by Dr. T. Wood.
